İpuçları

Bring the sugar mixture to a full rolling boil and maintain it for exactly 60 seconds - this ensures proper temperature for setting.

Use old-fashioned oats rather than quick oats for better texture and structure in the finished cookies.

Line your baking sheets with parchment paper before starting to cook, as you'll need to work quickly once the mixture is ready.

Use real butter instead of margarine for better flavor and proper consistency - margarine contains water that can affect setting.

If using crunchy peanut butter, add an extra 1/4 cup to compensate for the reduced binding power compared to smooth varieties.

Work quickly when dropping the cookies as the mixture begins to thicken and set up rapidly once removed from heat.

Place finished cookies in the refrigerator for 10-15 minutes to speed up the setting process if your kitchen is warm.

Test doneness by touching the surface lightly - properly set cookies won't leave residue on your finger.
